

Red Rocket's response

25 May 2026

The Green Building Africa article in question was essentially a reiteration of an article published by News24. Green Building Africa failed to approach us for comment or verification in terms of the allegations made in both articles.

Regrettably, the reporting is entirely inconsistent with the facts we shared transparently with News24. It contains serious allegations about the Virginia Solar Project without affording us a proper right of reply. We have limited context or information on the investigation referenced in the article, and to this date, despite requesting same, no evidence has been presented to us to substantiate such claims. It also grossly misrepresents the extensive commitments and controls in place on the Project, which evidence a strong commitment to compliance with both the letter and spirit of South African law.

We want to reassure the Business and Human Rights Centre and all Project stakeholders of Red Rocket's zero-tolerance policy toward any regulatory or ethical misconduct. We hold all our contractors and partners to the same high standards and should any suggested irregularities be substantiated, appropriate contractual action will be taken.

Sincerely,
